Summer Tips from Cheshire Constabulary

Summer holidays are great fun for children, but can bring risks. Here are some tips for keeping them safe.

New environments

If you go to stay with friends or relatives, their home or garden might not be as child-friendly as your home.

Children like to explore new surroundings, so make sure they don't go far on their own. Ask your hosts to place medicines and cleaning products out of sight and out of reach. Make sure you also check features such as ponds, barbecues and garden tools.

A few simple steps, such as nominating an adult to watch the children at a party, can reduce the risks.

Be safe around water

Water fascinates young kids, it's great fun and great exercise, but any of us can drown.

Even the best supervisors and carers can get briefly distracted, and all it takes to drown is three minutes face-down in water.

In 2012, 18 children under the age of 15 drowned in the UK. This included four at the beach or coast, and five in the bath. Among the 16-19 age group, 24 people drowned, at sites including beaches, rivers, canals and lakes.

Seven of these happened while swimming, and three from jumping or diving into water.

Ponds

Younger children between two and six years old are particularly vulnerable to drowning in features such as ponds or small water containers.

Between 5 and 10 children a year drown in garden ponds. If you've got a toddler, the best thing to do is fill the pond in with sand to make a sand pit. Otherwise, cover the pond with a substantial grille, or put a fence around it.

Finally, holidays and the summer months are a great time for children to learn swimming and water safety skills. Many councils and holiday companies offer intensive courses
